"QUEEN ESTHER"

REDOUNDS TO THE GLORY OF GLENDALE.

Editor Glendale News:

Doubtless musical critics who were fortunate enough to attend any of the three performances of the cantata of "Queen Esther" were surprised that so ambitious and finished a production could be given in so small a place as Glendale, and after only three or four weeks of rehearsals, but the call through the press for singers was happily responded to.

The individual singing and acting of the principal characters was far above the average, while the uniformity of action and gesture, one of the prime requisites in successful chorus work, was brought to a pleasing perfection under the direction of Mr. George L. Howes, who has had a large experience in musical work, having given "Queen Esther" alone nearly one hundred times, and who understands how to quickly accomplish splendid results.

The stage of Filger's opera house was extended to accommodate the one hundred singers who took part, and the varied stage effects, produced by the Persians, brilliantly clad in red and yellow, the magnificently attired king and queen, Haman, Zeresh and the Persian princesses, in sharp contrast to the Jews, garbed in somber black and white, were most pleasing to the artistic eye, and were so cleverly managed that inadequate stage capacity was scarcely apparent.

Aside from his ability as a musical director, Mr. Howes understands creating artistic and dramatic effects essential to a pleasing presentation, and the production throughout had an air of finesse and of the professional rarely seen in amateur performances.

The character of Queen Esther was most acceptably delineated by Miss Vera McKee, who has a clear, rich, highly cultivated soprano voice, which she handles delightfully.

Mr. Howes, as King Ahasuerus, has a fine, deep bass voice, so well fitting the character while he has taken so many times that he seems truly the character.

The wonderfully natural acting of Kenneth Barrager in the tragic part of haughty Haman, the king's counselor, was a revelation to the audience, who were, in their enthusiasm, even more pleased with that than with his excellent, well modulated tenor voice.

Miss Pearl Harrison, of Tropic, as proud and plotting Zeresh, captivated the audiences by her remarkable dramatic ability. Every look, every gesture, every turn of her head and movement of her body, expressed the passionate part she sang with a rich, sympathetic, expressive voice.

These two young people possess talent which should cause them to be heard from in the future, and do still greater honor to Glendale.

The character of Mordecai, the Jew, was effectively represented by Mr. A. R. Taylor, who, as choir master and tenor of the Baptist church, needs no introduction.

The part of Mordecai's sister was well taken by Miss Edith Cutler, who has a rich contralto voice of unusual flutelike qualities, and who recently had the privilege of singing for Busson.

The parts of high priest and prophetess were represented by Mr. and Mrs. George H. Curtis, trained and experienced musicians, who added greatly to the success of the performance.

The favorite voice of Owen Emery was heard in the part of scribe, and Mr. Harry Chase took the part of herald.

The Misses Esther Sinclair, Abbie and Gertrude Ward were charming as Persian princesses.

Glendale is famed as being the home of many artistic and literary people, and this splendid, elaborate musical production demonstrates the capacity for superb musical attainment.

FIRST CONCERT THURSDAY, AUGUST 24.

The long-talked-of bandstand was erected on Fourth street between Kenwood and Jackson streets, this week. Several months ago the matter of building this stand was taken up by the various civic organizations of this city, and for some reason no definite action was taken, although Mr. Thorp, leader of the band, had promised to give free concerts providing he and his band was given a suitable stand.

The decision to erect the stand was reached at a meeting of a joint committee consisting of Messrs. T. W. Watson, David L. Gregg and J. M. Banker from the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, and F. H. Muhleman, William Anderson, T. W. Watson, J. C. Sherer and David Carney, from the Glendale Valley Improvement Association.

Each of the organizations under which the stand was erected will stand half of the expense for material and labor.

Mr. Thorp announced this week that the first concert will be given by himself and boys on the evening of Thursday, August 24th, at 8 o'clock. There will doubtless be a large attendance. This is a step forward and the people of Glendale should do everything in their power to make this venture a success. Arrangements for seating those who attend will be made later. After the first concert the entertainments will be given every Thursday evening at the same hour, until further notice.

The personnel of the band will be as follows: Director, F. E. Thorp, O. A. Wellington, solo cornet; Walter M. Ross, solo cornet; E. H. Gerri, first cornet; F. C. Hilliard, second cornet; J. A. Yoder, solo clarinet; E. F. Archer, first clarinet; W. J. McIntyre, first clarinet; E. R. Naidalme, second clarinet; P. C. Butterfield, second clarinet; L. B. Case, first alto; B. C. Wallace, second alto; A. Bartlett, third alto; H. Henning, tenor; F. Moore, tenor; P. M. McIntyre, trombone; George H. Blythe, trombone; C. D. Furst, baritone; Clyde Worman, tuba; L. D. Goode, snare drum; C. M. Fowler, snare drum; T. M. Furst, bass drum.

ANOTHER MOTORCYCLE ACCIDENT.

Miss Alice Donaway of 634 Crocker street, Los Angeles, is at the point of death at the Burbank hospital as a result of a collision between the motorcycle on which Miss Donaway was riding, driven by Lawrence Y. Hill, also of Los Angeles, and a runabout in which Miss Myrtle Godfrey of Los Angeles and Will Holst of Burbank were riding. The accident happened on the San Fernando road at a point near the West Glendale grocery. Miss Donaway's skull was fractured, her wrist broken and it is believed that she sustained internal injuries. Mr. Hill escaped with comparatively slight injuries.

FIXING THE STREETS.

The city has been trying out a machine for working repairs on our streets and the demonstration on Third street and Isabel seem to warrant its purchase. The street at that point had become worn down by heavy traffic leaving great ridges of the soft material here and there and causing a general unevenness. This has all been smoothed over and the street surface is greatly improved.

ELSEWHERE AND HERE.

Mr. Sidney R. Dixon, agent for the Cudahy Packing Co., who has recently returned from a business trip through the East and Northwest, called at the NEWS office the other day. Mr. Dixon is a close observer of business conditions. He says that of numerous cities he has recently visited he found only three in which business could be said to be good; these are Detroit, Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles. The former is the greatest automobile manufacturing city in the world, over thirty of the principal machines being manufactured there. The factory of the Burroughs counting machine is also located there, employing over six thousand men. The biggest stove manufacturing concerns of the country are located there and the biggest seed establishment in the United States. Mr. Dixon stood on the street in Detroit one evening as the great factories were turning out their workmen for the day and saw over six thousand men emerge from one alley way and take the street cars, running on half-minute schedule, for their respective homes. All of the Puget Sound cities are very quiet in a business way but Portland is energetically pushing ahead. Like all Angelinos who wander, Mr. Dixon adds his voice to the familiar refrain "Southern California for me."

SCHOOL BUILDING SITE CHANGED.

There were about twenty-five persons present at the meeting last Friday evening at Odd Fellows hall, called for the purpose of instructing the grammar school trustees further in regard to a site for the proposed intermediate school building. Mr. R. A. Blackburn of the board of trustees called the meeting to order and Mr. T. W. Watson was chosen chairman. Mr. Blackburn stated the case as set forth in the NEWS last week and Mr. F. L. Muhleman made a motion which was seconded by Mr. O. A. Lane that the action of the previous meeting be rescinded. This was carried unanimously as was another motion by the same parties that the trustees be instructed to obtain the eight lots on Third street between Jackson and Kenwood, at a cost not to exceed ten thousand dollars. A further motion was adopted that the trustees be authorized to proceed with condemnation proceedings in regard to the upper two lots if necessary. The motion was harmonious throughout.

IN THE LOCAL MARKETS.

The situation in regard to melons is peculiar. The Los Angeles market is said to be overstocked and yet there as well as here the consumer pays from one and a quarter to one and a half cents a pound. The local market cannot take care of a large quantity of melons and so the grower who has any considerable quantity of them to dispose of has to haul them into Los Angeles where he finds that the market is broken down by large shipments received from the San Joaquin valley. Fourteen carloads of watermelons are said to have been received from there during the past week, but the experience of the shipper is not such as to encourage him in further shipments. The freight is five dollars a ton and melons are reported to have been sold on the cars for little more than freight. Local growers are not getting a fair price in wholesale lots, but the consumers are paying well for all they get. Midwesterners are evidently doing very well for themselves. The crop of peaches is not large and the fruit is retailing for three cents, local growers receiving two cents wholesale. The fruit generally does not yet seem to be up to the standard, the weather evidently not having been such as is required to give the fruit sweetness.

Other fruits are also in light supply with prices ruling higher than usual at this season. Tomatoes are becoming plentiful and are of good quality, the retail price being two and a half cents. This vegetable is coming into the local market from the home gardens in sufficient supply to meet the demand.

BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN FOUND.

While hunting in Stough's Canyon, a mile north of Burbank, Tuesday afternoon, C. F. Hathaway and H. M. Myers, both of Burbank, found the body of an unknown man. Upon making the discovery, the hunters immediately notified the coroner, who informed the Pulliam Undertaking company. The undertaking company's wagon went immediately to the scene and brought the body to the parlors at this place.

There was no way to ascertain definitely how the unfortunate man met his death, but it is believed that he committed suicide. A hole made by a 38-caliber revolver was found at the right side of the skull. By the condition of the body it is believed that it must have been lying in the canyon for at least two months. It was well dressed, and in the pockets about twenty dollars were found. The only means of identification is a small keyring, on which was the name of Portland, Oregon. Blake Kendall, deputy sheriff, assisted the party from the undertaking company in bringing the body to this city.

Another list of excellent volumes has been added to the library shelves. THE PANAMA-CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION.

San Diego, Aug. 18.—Hon. John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American Union, who was sent to San Diego as the personal representative of President Taft on the occasion of the ground breaking celebration for the Panama-California International Exposition, read a letter from the president to the fifty thousand visitors assembled in San Diego, the import of which was very gratifying to the men who are engaged in the work of planning and building the exposition here. Among other things the president said:

"San Diego is so situated that she is necessarily very much interested in the opening of the Panama canal, and the facts that this exposition is to give particular attention to the relations between this country and the Central and South American countries is sufficient reason why the American public should be especially interested in its success.

"I know San Diego because I have been there twice. My father and mother and sister lived there for years and my father died there. I appreciate the singular beauty of its situation, and the wonderful character of its climate. And all of these circumstances give me a personal interest in promoting its welfare and helping to assure the success of an enterprise like this."

Mr. Barrett, in his address, said: "Through this happy letter President Taft has conveyed a sympathetic and encouraging message to the people of San Diego, and the officials of the exposition. There is nothing, therefore, for me to say on his behalf beyond emphasizing something which is not fully embodied in the letter—and that is the real, sincere and personal interest he manifested as he discussed with me the execution of this commission and requested me to represent him in the welfare of San Diego, California, in the great Southwest of the United States, in its relations with Latin America, and in the effect upon the Pacific nations of both North and South America of the completion of the Panama canal. It is no exaggeration to state that you can feel absolutely assured of the support and cooperation of the president in every way consistent with his position, in making the Panama-California International Exposition one of the most notable celebrations ever held in the United States."

WHY LOS ANGELES WANTS SOUTH PASADENA.

It is evident that there are two reasons why Los Angeles wishes to annex South Pasadena.

Both reasons are purely selfish on the part of Los Angeles. According to the report of the Special Engineers employed by the Los Angeles public service commission, when the Owens river aqueduct is completed, Los Angeles will have at its disposal 28,000 miner's inches of water. Its population is 350,000, which 3,150 inches will supply. This will leave 24,850 inches surplus. Los Angeles must find a market for this surplus water.

South Pasadena has an assessed valuation of $4,700,000, with a bonded indebtedness of only $32,000 for the Arroyo bridge, which bonds are not yet running as they have not been sold. There is a bonded indebtedness on the school district of $177,000, but this does not apply to the municipality. Los Angeles is looking but for bonding territory, and it sees this in South Pasadena, with its present low bonded indebtedness.

Los Angeles, Pasadena and South Pasadena now have plenty of water in this vicinity, developed and undeveloped, to supply present needs without the Owens river supply, so that with the Owens river supply, a large portion of which Los Angeles must sell, and the necessity of securing more bonded territory, the attitude that Los Angeles is assuming of standing back and giving the surrounding suburban municipalities to understand that they cannot have a share in Los Angeles water without ultimately becoming annexed and sharing in the bonded indebtedness, is one of the most gigantic bluffs in the history of the Golden West.

Loyal citizens of South Pasadena need not become frightened at the representations of Los Angeles annexationists, for there will be plenty of water to supply this city's needs for many years to come.—So. Pas. Record.

Mr. G. W. Bercau has been appointed acting agent for the Pacific Electric, the L. A. & P. R. R., and the L. A. & R. R. at Redondo Beach, during the absence of the regular agent at that point.

Manager of light department was authorized to provide lights for new band stand.

The following resolution was passed unanimously and ordered spread on the council records. A copy to be presented to Mr. Anderson and to be published in local papers:

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas in the Providence of the Divine Father our Comrade Nathan Berlingham has been removed from our ranks, and where as his loyalty to the union and his brave defense of the flag of our country when it was assailed by a ruthless foe, fought to keep his memory green for all the coming years.

Therefore, Resolved, That we as members of N. P. Banks Post No. 170 G. A. R. express to the family our high appreciation of our comrade's worth as a soldier and citizen and will pray that the grace of the Divine Father may be extended to the bereaved ones and may they all bivaouac 'neath the shade of the tree of Life which is planted hard by the river whose waters never fail.

ILLINOIS CAPITALIST TO EAGLE ROCK.

R. H. Brown has sold the choicest lot in Engledale subdivision to Wm. S. Warfield, a retired banker and wholesale grocer of Quincy, Ill. The price being $2000 and the lot being 100x400 feet on Rock Glen avenue. Mr. Warfield formerly owned the street car system in Quincy and is also still interested in the tobacco trust. He was recently married to his second wife and the couple may locate in California for their declining years, although they now have a $100,000 residence in Quincy. Mr. Warfield is a personal friend of Eugene Brown, son of the owner of the Engledale tract who was editor of the Quincy Herald for many years and is now living in Eagle Rock.—E. R. Sentinel.

CASA VERDUGO WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Following a quarrel with her husband, Sunday night, Mrs. J. S. Patten attempted to take her own life by drinking carbolic acid. The rash deed took place in the vacant yard adjacent to the La Ramada restaurant, of which Mr. Patten is cashier. Mrs. Patten was discovered in the act of drinking the acid by several guests at the restaurant, and it is believed that the immediate alarm which these guests sent in was responsible for the attempt being unsuccessful. It is claimed that jealousy was the cause which led to the deed. Mr. Patten has resigned his position as cashier of the restaurant and has taken his wife away.

Miss Jennie C. Sloan, 1231 West Seventh street, Glendale, is now enjoying the beauties of Catalina for a short time.

REGULATING WATER RATES.

The city of Watts recently attempted the regulation of rates to be charged for water in that municipality. Their idea was that $1.00 a month was enough to pay for domestic water. The company went into court, however, and proved that this rate would amount to confiscation, so the city by ordinance has fixed the rate at $1.25 with a charge of 15 cents per 1000 gallons for excess water.

Dr. Burt Estes Howard, formerly a popular Los Angeles preacher, now a professor at Stanford University, delivered an address at the meeting of the City Club in Los Angeles the other day, that contained some things quite worth while. Speaking of colleges he said: "Apparatus is a poor substitute for ideals, and the best endowment of a college is the character of its graduates." And again, "We cannot afford to have the traditions of our colleges become largely the traditions of certain suspiciously rich men who made money and built buildings."

Los Angeles is to have the largest and best equipped hospital on the coast. That it will be a dividend paying concern goes without saying and that it will have a catchy philanthropic name may also be guessed. The hospitals of Los Angeles are among the best of our dividend producers and the least philanthropic.

Capt. John Cross died in Los Angeles a few days ago. Capt. Cross was a railroad man and will be remembered by old residents of Tropic and Glendale, as the builder of the Terminal (now Salt Lake) railroad into this section. Capt. Cross was an old soldier of the civil war and a builder of short line railroads. He served one session in the legislature and was an all around good citizen.

THAT IOLA CASE.

Who says that sentiment does not rule the world, and who shall further say that woman gets all of her "rights"? A dissolute female citizen in Iola, Kas., was sentenced by the judge of the local court to serve in the chain gang, the law being supposed to be respectful of neither person or sex. At once a great outcry arose in the classic precincts of Iola and the demand was vociferous that the law should respect sex, all theories to the contrary notwithstanding. The judge stood firm, but the mayor of the town, came to the rescue when he discovered that he possessed the pardoning power, and turned the erring lady loose. At latest accounts the male victims of the woman criminal (some erring boys) were still in jail. Presumably the lady was decked with bouquets of the whitest flowers of purity as she emerged from the Kansas battle. And again we say, Next!

Temperance in the use of intoxicating drinks is susceptible to many interpretations and leads to divers forms of action. In practice the principle may range all the way from abstinence between infrequent drinks to total abstinence, and from local option to enforced prohibition. The theory of the writer has always been that laws, according to their nature and their environment, express the principles of the people which they represent. While it is true that law can do much to suppress nuisances and remove temptations from the unwary, long experience has proved that the law that does these things, and is heartily supported by the people, is not itself the cause of the new morality, but the expression of it. Brief episodes of abstinence or debauchery may follow changes in local legislation, but in the long run the legislation, the enforcement of the laws, and the practice of temperance must depend upon the moral principles of the people.—Christian Register.

NEW LAW IN REGARD TO FIRM NAMES.

All unincorporated concerns doing business under a title which does not indicate the identity of the person or persons carrying on the business, such as "Los Angeles Hardware Co.," "Cut Rate Grocery," etc., must file a certificate with the county clerk, on or before Sept. 23rd of this year. This certificate must give the name of the person or persons carrying on the business, with details as to location, etc. This applies to all firms operating at the time of the passage of the law, March 23rd, 1911. New firms must file the certificate within one month after the formation of the company.

The charge for filing the certificate is one dollar. The statement must be acknowledged before a notary. It must be published once a week for four weeks in a newspaper printed in the county where the business is located and an affidavit as to publication secured.

The notary's charge will be fifty cents for each acknowledgment.

A firm operating under the name of "Smith and Brown" will have to file a statement giving the initials of the partners.

BET SUGAR.

Congressman Stevens is carrying on a campaign of education as he considers it, by sending broadcast throughout the state, a pamphlet recommending beet sugar. Mr. Stevens is attempting by this means to popularize the use of this instead of the cane product so as to boost the industry in California. Possibly the quality of beet sugar has been improved recently by the application of new methods of manufacture, but it is more than a "prejudice" on the part of California housewives that has made it unpopular. However it does not seem necessary to popularize its use here for there seems to be no particular difficulty found in disposing of it somewhere. Probably the best way to increase the demand for it would be to reduce the price to considerably nearer cost. It has never been discovered that it can be bought here at the door of the factory by the consumer any cheaper than it can elsewhere. The manufacturers of beet sugar seem to have a pretty good thing and the housewives of California need not exert themselves greatly for the benefit of this very prosperous business.

BUILD FOR COMFORT.

A well known Missouri business man came to Glendale about a year ago, rented a house with the intention of making this his home and presently engaged in business. Now he is preparing to return to his old home satisfied that this is not the place for him. Why? Well he got into a big house that was built for room and not for comfort. A big living room was connected with the upper floor by a wide open stairway; a lonesome fireplace in one end built more for ornament than use, added to the comfortable appearance of the room in summer but in winter was a hollow mockery. There was just one room that could be closed up on a wintry day and made comfortable by a small fire; that was the kitchen. So in the kitchen the family lived. The rooms were so arranged that none of them received too much sunshine that was going to waste outside when the weather was clear, and when the days were cloudy the chill could not be chased from the atmosphere. When the winter was ended and fires are not usually needed, the big house lacking sunshine retained its chill and so until the weather really became warm there was but little comfort in the house. There are many houses in Southern California built by people who ought to know better where there is no adequate provision made for comfort during the winter days when the sun does shine. Our climate is mild it is true, but one can experience intense discomfort here in winter in trying to live in a house where no proper provision is made for artificial heat. The comfort that is contained in a little three dollar stove in a room that can be closed up properly, cannot be measured easily, for it means all of the difference between home and life in a cheerless barn, and to the stranger among us it means infinitely more than to the native to the manor born. Many of our hotels and boarding houses overlook this necessary detail of comfort during our winter season and it is one that cannot be impressed too strongly upon home builders. Build for comfort.

OUR ADVERTISEMENTS AND WHAT COMES OF THEM.

Everybody reads this paper except the few who can't read, and they talk about it. The immediate results of advertising in our columns is sometimes embarrassing. For instance a lady dropped in some time ago and paid for a small ad, one of those little things that take up a few lines of space and cost 25 cents. She had a room to rent. After paying for the ad she remarked to the clerk who took in the money over our mahogany counter, "perhaps you know of some one who wants a room." Well he did, but he ought to have known better than to have said so, for as soon as he told her where to find the party she said, "Thank you; please return my quarter. I believe I won't advertise this week." Every now and then some one comes in and writes out an ad, saying, "run that until further orders." The clerk marks it "T.F." and when the proprietor sees it he chuckles to himself and says "Aha, I guess that's good for six months," but before the week expires a voice comes over the telephone. "Say you better stop that ad; I've had such a run of custom that everything is sold out." Only last week a merchant advertised a special article the proprietor's wife read the advertisement she immediately ordered one delivered at the house and charged up to the newspaper. It will take about three months to get even. All is not gold that looks shiny. Funny how people look at the same proposition and see it differently from their different point of view. Our solicitor approaches a merchant with a timid appeal for an advertisement and is informed that there is "nothing doing; got more business than I can attend to. If I get more I'll land in the poor house," while the man across the way says "Nipe, times too dull, can't afford to advertise now, call around later when things get better." A week or two ago a well-known merchant lost a valuable and valued fountain pen. He neglected to advertise it until almost a fortnight elapsed, then he invested his quarter in a few touching lines. The foreman of the office noticed the copy and when on the street the next day was approached by a boy of his acquaintance who inquired if he knew of anybody who had lost a pen—the foreman owned up that he did and even before the advertisement was printed it did its effective work. Three or four months ago a citizen of Orange street advertised for a lost watch. Time passed as it does in some places and it was only a week ago that a Tropic lady telephoned us that in catching up on accumulated literature she had just read in the NEWS of some date last May about that watch which her little girl had found in the street. Thus virtue is its own reward and the time (piece) that is lost may sometime be regained. Occasionally the lost article advertised is not regained, doubtless because the misguided owner thinks that he can find everything in the Los Angeles papers. For instance here in our drawer is a beautiful set of false teeth picked up on the street a year or two ago, duly advertised by us, but still unclaimed. Never mind, we will present them some bright and beautiful Christmas time to the young lady who brings us in the biggest list of new subscribers; or perhaps Mrs. Toodles will come in some day and buy them of us just because "they would be handy to have in the family, you know."

CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Editor. We note in your last issue an article on amendment number 8, which amendment is now before the people of the state, and being discussed pro and con in your excellent paper. In the article referred to, the interesting question is asked "Shall women be required to assume the duties of public life." If we just glance about us and see women striving to gain an honest livelihood in about all the trades and professions in which men labor, we must say they are required to assume the duties of public life and the duty or privilege which ever we may call it, of the ballot cannot, and will not rob her of any womanly charms or graces. It is claimed that women will not avail themselves of the privilege of voting should the right of suffrage be granted them. There are many men who do not go to the polls and vote, so there will be many women, but why deny the right to all women because there are some who do not care to vote or use their influence in making the laws by which they are governed. The awakening has come to the noble women of our state and they are organizing their forces to meet the special election on Oct. 10. If they are defeated at that election, they will in no way feel they wrought in vain.—Rurale, San Fernando.

To the Glendale Union High School Trustees:

It seems to be understood by some that there is a state school law which makes it impossible for the Glendale Union High School trustees to grant the use of the high school auditorium for other than school purposes. If such is the case, it is commendable in the board to adhere closely to this law.

It is also understood by others that the school board has authority within itself to decide for what purposes the building shall be used, in which case it would be most praiseworthy if the board would allow the auditorium to be used for purposes of general benefit to the public, especially in cases where no other stage or hall is of sufficient capacity, as was the case in the "Queen Esther" cantata. As many taxpayers are not pleased because of this auditorium standing idle several months during each year, will the high school trustees please explain.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Weak-Minded Women Versus Strong-Minded Men.

It is well understood that women are, naturally "weak-minded." A strong-minded man is honored, but a "strong-minded" woman is looked upon as a hideous or ridiculous monstrosity. Men are made to be strong, robust, vigorous, athletic; but women are expected to be "delicate," with slender waists, small hands, dainty feet, weak nerves, and dyspepsia.

And yet there is something curious about these weak-minded women. A strong-minded man, of course, does not "take any stock in religion." He does not believe in the Bible, or in priests, churches, or any of that kind of nonsense. He is not to be fooled by anything of that kind. So while the weak-minded woman takes a cup of tea, the strong-minded man takes a glass of whisky. The weak-minded woman goes to prayer meeting and puts ten cents in the contribution box, while the strong-minded man spends his evenings at the wine shop or billiard saloon, at the expense of from fifty cents to five dollars. The weak-minded woman comes home alone at half-past nine. The strong-minded man is helped home by a caddy or a policeman at midnight; or perhaps sings "We won't go home till morning," and ends in a lock-up and prisoner's dock. More than two-thirds of the membership of the various churches are women; but of the many convicts in the penitentiaries of the country nine-tenths are men. The majority of the praying people are weak-minded women. The majority of the infidels, gamblers, blackguards, saloonkeepers, burglars, roughs and rowdies are strong-minded men. The persons who hang around bar rooms, waiting for someone to ask them to drink, are strong-minded men. The persons who go around looking up the distressed, caring for the needy, feeding the hungry, and making coats and garments for the poor, are weak-minded women. The persons who are struggling to make eight hours a day's work are strong-minded men. The persons who are working sixteen and eighteen hours a day to cook and care for those very gentlemen, while they spend their leisure time in billiard saloons and dram shops, are weak-minded women. The persons who work with such tremendous industry at "bottoming chairs" in rum shops are strong-minded men. Those who bend their backs over washtubs and ironing boards, and toil with equal diligence, are weak-minded women.

Finally, two-thirds of the persons who get tired of living, and sneak out of life's battle by blowing their brains out or committing suicide, are strong-minded men, while their weak-minded wives struggle on, stick by the stuff, take in washing, bring up their children, and get along a little better when they are left alone than they did when their husbands were living; and they can carry a big bundle of clothes which they have washed right by the very saloon door, past which their strong-minded husbands were at a cut rate and as soon as the pro not able to carry a sixpence without stopping. Truly, woman is "the weaker vessel," and so, of course, ought to be very careful and not carry too much ball. Man is strong, but he is not quite as strong as the Lord Almighty; and the strongest man known in New England some years ago, a man strong enough to whip his weak-minded wife, abuse a weak-minded waiter girl, and beat a horse, which was not supposed to have any mind, a man strong enough to be the world's champion bully, has been repeatedly felled by a rum bottle. His strength was not equal to that of his adversary, and he has gone down again and again before the power of the cup. Surely men are strong, and women are very weak; but a woman that serves the Lord is quite likely to be stronger than a man who serves the devil.—H. L. Hastings, in California Voice.

Mrs. Stella B. Irvine, of Riverside, national superintendent of the Sunday school department of the W. C. T. U., reports that adult Bible classes for men are strongly urged. Several instances were given where this had been done, resulting in victories over the liquor forces, as they federated in a no-license campaign. And one pleasing feature in the several days' program was when 1,000 men delegates marched through the streets of San Francisco, shouting "The saloons must go." The public is accustomed to hear the children sing these words, but when strong men take it up, it means "They surely will go."

ADVANTAGES OF MEDICAL COM-PETITION.

"We, as Eclectics, are a separate and independent school of medicine, but we are not the only one. It is necessary and beneficial to have a variety of schools of medicine as it is to have parties in politics or sects in religion. Each school, party or sect, permits the citizen to have a choice, to select what he wants, and gives him the opportunity to act with those of his own way of thinking. This is his constitutional right under our system of free government of which we are all so proud. Attempts have been made to invade and annul this inalienable right. The same spirit of monopoly which pervades the commercial world is also found in medicine. To establish one school of medicine, to the exclusion of all others would create state medicine, which is just as obnoxious and dangerous as is state religion. A variety of schools, parties or sects is an advantage, as it causes a friendly rivalry by each one striving to excel the other, and a healthy competition that benefits the majority which is as it should be, especially in a government like ours where majorities rule. This coveted power has been sought after for many years by the political ring in the American Medical association, which it hopes to obtain eventually through state and national legislation.

All of the minor schools of medicine, known as the Allies, are opposed to such action on the ground that it is class legislation and unconstitutional; but neither one of the allies is strong enough to engage the enemy single handed. It also does not seem to be convenient for them to unite their several interests in one counter organization. In this crisis a new and welcome friend has appeared upon the scene to lend a helping hand. The National League for Medical Freedom was organized one short year ago as a lay movement in opposition to the offensive activity of the American Medical Association to force the Ower bill through congress and establish a public bureau of health. Owing to the League's timely and energetic protest the bill failed to pass, but it is up again in a modified but no less objectionable form to be acted on during the present extra session of congress. That the bill will be again defeated goes without saying, now that the people have been warned of their danger. If such a bill ever becomes law, it will be a serious menace to liberty and freedom in the United States and will be the entering wedge for other objectionable and harmful legislation of a like character.

THE CASH INTRIGUE

When the company sat down to dinner Kelvin found at his plate the early bulletin. They were all highly favorable to the election of Kelvin and Rollins and had the effect of starting the dinner with much lightness of spirit. At 10 o'clock, however, unfavorable bulletins began to come in, one after the other, and Senator Sawyer, worried beyond measure by the unexpected development, came bustling into the room.

"I don't understand it," he declared. "It would look as if the labor vote had suddenly switched."

"I cannot understand how the labor vote should have been estranged," commented Kelvin slowly; "but, after all, what does it matter? The thing in which I am chiefly interested just now is not cause, but result. We can analyze the situation afterward."

Blagg, still smiling, left the room, returning a moment later with still other depressing news. The table had been cleared, only wine and cigars and cigarettes remaining, and Breed's company alternated nervously between the balcony and the table, sitting outside at times to watch the big illuminated screen across the street. The most of them were inside when, at the end of an hour of almost continued bad news, Blagg brought in a particularly unfavorable telegram, one purporting to come from the national committee and conceding the possible defeat of Kelvin by a narrow margin.

"I'm bound to confess that it looks bad," Kelvin was forced to admit, "but I'm like you, senator; I can't understand it. I don't see what element could have worked against me."

"I can tell you," suddenly broke in the voice of Blagg, a voice that was shrill in its long suppressed triumph. "I did it. I am at the head of an organization of a quarter of a million men, each one sworn with his life against the principles you represent. I sent them out the word immediately after your nomination and once a week since to vote against you and to work against you tooth and nail, and they have done it. You owe your defeat to me." And he beat both hands upon his chest in his madness of exultation.

Kelvin eyed him coldly. "You were not asked for any comments or explanations, Mr. Blagg," he observed. "For the remainder of the evening you will kindly and without unnecessary conversation attend to the duties which permit you to enter this room."

Blagg caught his breath sharply and trembled. His hands clinched convulsively, but suddenly he wheeled and strode from the room.

A cheer, the first hearty one in a half hour, attracted them to the balcony. The bulletin across the street was displaying a highly favorable message, which proved to be the turning of the tide. Lillian went into Blagg's room to telephone for Elsie White. Blagg was in a chair in the corner, with his handkerchief to his mouth, and there were red stains upon it. He rose as Lillian entered.

"You may go get that cigar now," he said to his assistant, who was at the key. "What did I tell you?" he demanded, turning to Lillian as soon as the operator had gone. "Who has shown the greater power—Kelvin or myself? He is through, and it is I who have defeated him. It is only the start of the things I am destined to do, and with your help I can conquer worlds. Lillian, come with me." He caught her by the shoulder. "You know where there is a billion and a half dollars in cash. With this money we can overturn the entire rotten social and financial and political system of this country and sway the mightiest empire in the world to our will. I've talked of this phase first because you have not let me talk of love, but now I must speak of it, Lillian. I am dying for the love of you. Come right now, while you have a chance, and we'll go to Forest Lake immediately—tonight. I've a thousand men where I can mass them in an hour. Come! Kelvin will cast you off like a broken toy."

CHAPTER XIX.

SLOWLY, holding his eyes with her own, Lillian's hand placed the point of a pin upon one of Blagg's knuckles and twirled it. Out of all the devilment that lay in her she had selected this trifling action as being the most contemptuous within her invention, and, laughing in his face, she swept from the room and sent a page for Elsie. She rejoined the others upon the balcony, laughing from sheer light heartedness, and nestled down in a chair close by Phillip. In the dimness she even rested her forearm across his knee and shared with the others their increasing pleasure in the return from outlying country districts, where the vote had been almost to a man for Kelvin and Rollins. By 1 o'clock the election of Kelvin and Rollins was assured beyond all possibility of a doubt, and telegrams of congratulation began to pour in, and, tired, but exultant, the watchers came in from the balcony. Rollins as he entered the room turned and shook hands with Kelvin.

"Well, we've won," said he. "It seems that Mr. Blagg's organization of patriots was not so powerful after all." "Blagg!" exclaimed Senator Sawyer and laughed heartily. "Wasn't that a curious thing? I shall always remember your man, Blagg."

"Yes, you shall remember Blagg, all of you!" shrieked a voice, and, turning, they saw the tall, thin form of the wireless operator standing in the doorway. Before any one could divine his intention he had sprung at Phillip.

Something glittered in the light as he raised his arm and flashed as he brought it down, and Kelvin dropped to the floor. Blagg sprang for the door to the hall, but met Sam coming in, and Sam, seeing Phillip lying upon the floor, required no explanation. In an instant, for the second time in their lives, his hands were about Blagg's throat, and he bore him to the door. Horror-stricken, Sawyer and Rensselaer and Zeiphan and the attending butler rushed to drag Sam away from his victim, while Rollins turned his attention to Phillip. It had all happened in an instant—the stabbing of Phillip, Sam's assault upon Blagg and the piling of the other men upon Sam—and in that instant Elsie White had shrieked and thrown herself upon her knees beside Phillip's prostrate form.

"Phillip!" she cried in anguish, and in that cry the secret of her heart was made known. All the pent-up love that she had felt for him and had hidden revealed itself in that wailing call upon his name.

Lillian Breed, her face inflamed with sudden passion, leaned over the girl and, grasping her by the shoulders, shook her violently, discharged her and called upon a page to have the girl thrown into the street.

In the meantime Phillip had opened his eyes and a moment later raised himself to his elbow, feeling at his heart.

"Are you badly hurt?" asked Rollins. "No, I think not," replied Phillip, dazed. "I think I was only stunned by the force of the blow. I doubt if I even have a flesh wound." And, taking Rollins' hand, he rose to his feet and sat in a chair.

It was in that moment that Rollins saw Lillian raise her hand to strike Elsie, and he sprang in between them, putting a protecting arm around Elsie's shoulder.

Lillian laughed shrilly. "It seems that my clever little maid has aroused the gallantry of more than one of my friends," she charged.

"No," returned Rollins calmly. "I only love her, and I'm going to call a cab and send her over to my mother at the Hotel Spuyten."

The disturbance rose anew in the group about the door. Rensselaer and Dr. Zeiphan had Sam on the floor on his back. Senator Sawyer and the attending butler had raised Blagg to his feet and stood with him near the door. He was ashen white and was quivering all over. His hands were at his throat, and he was gasping for breath.

"Send for a policeman," the butler ordered the bewildered page.

"No," interposed Kelvin. "Don't do that. Let the man go. It is not good policy to have this known."

Sawyer, panting for breath, nodded his head vigorously. "You are quite right, Mr. Kelvin," said he and stepped away from Blagg's side.

"You are letting me go at your own peril," warned Blagg, gasping out the words.

"If you stay it will be at yours," returned Phillip and got upon his feet.

As he did so something heavy and metallic and bright dropped to the floor. Blagg took a step forward, stopped, laughed bitterly and tottered out into the hall.

Kelvin stooped and picked up the object that had fallen. It was the heavy paperweight dagger that Blagg had stolen from Phillip's desk a year before. Phillip held it up by its tip.

"That's twice this thing has threatened me," said he, "and each time it has failed. I think I shall keep it as my emblem and my talisman."

An unusual commotion arose in the street, and there were loud cheers and calls for Kelvin. He looked inquiringly at Sawyer.

"It's none of my doing," declared the senator. "You'd better show yourself and say a few words, I guess."

Kelvin advanced hesitatingly to the window and held out his hand for Rollins to come with him. Before he emerged upon the balcony he turned and once more held up the dagger. He noticed as he did so, however, that it stood in the shade of a cross, and he immediately reversed it with the glittering point in the air.

"In this sign I conquer," he laughingly quoted, and then he went out upon the balcony to exhibit himself as president elect of the United States.

Senator Sawyer after having awaited his turn for nearly an hour in the outer offices, came red faced with anger into the presence of President Kelvin.

"By George, it's true!" he spluttered, looking about him. "At first I thought it a newspaper joke, but it's true. You are polluting the White House with all the pomp and trappings of actual royalty."

The portly senator glared about him in the indignation. A low platform had been erected in the end of this apartment, and upon it stood a richly carved, flat top mahogany desk, while behind this sat Kelvin in an enormous high-backed chair, strikingly suggestive of a throne. On one side of him stood Sam and on the other a huge, ebony black negro exactly matching Sam except for that livid scar upon his ugly left cheek. Both of them were clad in blue and gold liveries. Besides Phillip's there was not another chair in the apartment, it being the obvious intent that visitors should stand.

"I do not understand what you mean by it," Mr. Sawyer went on. "The entire press of the country is aflame with it. When I picked up my paper in Chicago yesterday morning and read of the alterations you had made I was astounded. I took the first train out and came straight here."

"Very prompt and decisive in you, I am sure," returned Kelvin, with open sarcasm.

"Prompt and decisive action is necessary to save the party," the senator hotly retorted, "and the country," he added as an afterthought. "While you were installing yourself in all this extravagant claptrap, I saw as I went to the train in Chicago that monster parade of the unemployed. This morning I read of the brutal and unprovoked police attack upon them, of the riot which followed, of the calling out of the state troops, of the killing of a score of men and of your edict late last night placing the city under martial law. That is a long score added to your account, Kelvin. To the twenty killed in Chicago add the seventeen killed in Philadelphia, the nine in Cincinnati and the six in St. Louis, and you have more than I would care to carry on my conscience."

"What did you come to see me about, senator?" demanded Kelvin coldly. "There are many others waiting."

"I came to protest against your entire administration," blazed Sawyer. "Before your nomination, to gain the influence of certain powerful corporations, you had Vice President Rollins, as manager of the united railroad system of the United States, give them valuable rebate concessions. After your election you have, through Feltman, who succeeded Rollins as czar of the railroads, stopped every concession and forced a perfect riot of restrictive legislation. With your railroad policy, legislative meddling and artificially produced money stringency you have stopped mills and factories by the hundred and have disrupted the entire industrial system of the country."

"Precisely what was needed," was the surprising reply. "Next will come the readjustment. We shall return to the era of smaller competitive concerns and a far better distribution of wealth."

"I do not believe it," snapped the senator. "To me such conditions would look like going backward. Left to itself the trust and combine and monopoly situation would work out its own salvation, for these aggregations of units were in the line of logical commercial progress, but while we stand here arguing this purely abstract question 100,000 men are on the verge of starvation. They are desperate men and some relief must be offered them at once. What are you going to do about it?"

"Go right on with my program," announced Kelvin calmly, picking up from his desk a heavy paper knife made in the shape of a dagger and toying with it.

"You will not go right on with it," declared the senator, striking his closed fist upon a corner of Kelvin's desk. "You're going to have a revolt on your hands in both the senate and house."

"And I suppose that you will lead the revolt in the senate," suggested Kelvin quietly.

"If need be, sir!" thundered the senator. "I know at what you are hinting—that my self interest will stand in the way. But I hope, sir, I am sufficiently patriotic that when my country calls I shall answer her cry of distress."

"Exactly," rejoined Phillip dryly. "I would expect nothing else from a gentleman of your well known patriotism. In the meantime you have a stiff mortgage on your house in Washington and an equally heavy one on your place out west, both of which mortgages have eventually found their way into the hands of Mr. Breed, which perhaps you did not know."

Senator Sawyer was shocked into highly uncomfortable silence.

"You at least are not going to revolt," went on Phillip, "and if you came here representing any clique or combination of law peddlers you may go back and tell them that I intend to have my way first, last and all the time. I shall not permit any interference. Did you come upon any other errand?"

The senator's red faced rage had given way to pale faced apprehension.

"About those mortgages," he said, shifting uneasily. "I don't suppose that there will be any present trouble about them."

"I couldn't say, I'm sure," returned Kelvin. "You'll have to see the head of Mr. Breed's real estate department about that. If you should need any ready cash my private purse is open to you to the extent of, say, a thousand."

The senator wheeled instantly. "If you can accommodate me with a trifling temporary loan—of a thousand for sixty days, say—I would appreciate it very much," he said, smiling ingratiatingly.

"No trouble at all," said Phillip pleasantly and immediately began writing out a check.

The senator was followed by a procession of office seekers and favor hunters, of whom Kelvin disposed briefly, and then came Rollins. Much recent worry had left him pale.

"Kelvin, we have been wrong from the first," he confessed after brief greetings. "You are carrying out many of the alleged reforms over which we talked, but they are not reforms. The ultimate aim was right, but the means are wrong. They are too violent, too drastic, and they have succeeded only in disturbing the economic system to an appalling extent."

"Not to any greater extent than I had calculated," returned Kelvin. "This confusion must prevail in the interim between the passing away of the old order of things and the institution of the new. You will see that the period of suffering will be but a brief one and that we shall emerge from the entire revolution—for it amounts to nothing less—upon a sounder basis than any commonwealth in the history of the world, with a larger ultimate percentage of happiness than heretofore enjoyed by any state."

Rollins shook his head. "You are mistaken," said he earnestly. "No peaceable economic readjustment is possible when any large number of the members of the body politic have reached the stage of starving desperation."

"You don't see very far, Rollins," replied Kelvin patiently. "You are basing all your calculations for new emergencies upon old principles. Has it ever occurred to you that the solution of all our economic difficulties might be found in an entirely new system of government?"

Women and Stocks.

Women speculators have a habit of giving to brokers orders with a string attached to them. A woman who owned some bank stock asked a broker to sell it at 250 if he thought she could not get any more for it. The market in this stock had been inactive for months, and 250 was the highest price ever recorded for it. The next day the broker had a chance to sell the stock at 250. It so happened that on the same day a lively demand for this bank stock developed, and before the day was over it was selling at 300. The broker wrote to his woman customer that he had sold her stock for $250 a share and would send her certificate to him for delivery to the purchaser. She refused to deliver the stock.

"You ought to have known better than to sell it for 250," she remonstrated. "I am going to sell it today myself for 300."

It was not until the broker appealed to the courts that he succeeded in getting the stock from the woman.—Strand Magazine.

Pretty Fine Scratches.

Most people consider a polished surface as something absolutely smooth—that is, something with no scratches on it whatever. To polish a thing, however, the very reverse is done to it. It is filled with very fine scratches. All eggless lenses, glass for mirrors, furniture, etc., are rubbed with fine emery paper and later with an extremely fine powder which gives the finishing touches in the shape of very fine scratches. Now the question arises as to just how fine the scratches must be—that is, how far apart they must be, for big scratches a good distance apart give anything but a polished surface. The answer is that the scratches or ridges between must be less than one-quarter the wave length of the light that falls on the surface for the light to be reflected and thus give the effect of a polished surface. This is less than one two-hundred-thousandth of an inch for light waves. No breaking up of the waves is caused, and they consequently are reflected in their original form.—New York Tribune.

The Offense Defined.

General Craft, an attorney of Terre Haute, Ind., was once called into a jewelry store in the town to settle a dispute.

"See here, general," explained the proprietor, "if I take a watch from Mr. Smith here and make repairs that cost me 10 cents and then keep it hanging up for a week and charge him 90 when he comes to get it, what percentage do I make? We have been figuring for half an hour and only get up to 800 per cent, and that is but a dollar, so we decided to leave it to you."

"Well," said the general gravely, "you must know that it is a fact, and it has been demonstrated by calculating machines, that at certain points in progressive numbers the law governing them changes. In your case the law would change long before it reached the 90 and would run out of percentage and into what is known and designated as larceny."

Open Door and a Light.

The wives of north country colliers observe a very touching and pathetic custom when an accident occurs in the pit. Directly it is known to the wife of a collier that an accident has happened in the pit where her husband works and that his fate is uncertain she throws open the house door, and, however inclement the weather may be, she keeps the door open and a candle burning in the window night and day till the man is brought home, dead or alive. In some cases the door has remained open and the candle alight during several weeks.—London Graphic.

Dainty Snails.

The writer who qualified the snail as "foul and unclean" was guilty of a libel. Snails are most dainty feeders and strict vegetarians, as many gardeners know to their cost. Apparently three centuries ago snails were more popular in England than they are now. The fastidious author of "The Faerie Queene" gives a recipe for their preparation:

With our sharp weapons we shall thee fray
And take the castle that thou trest in;
We shall thee flay out of thy foute skin,
And in a dish, with onions and pepper,
We shall thee dress with strong vine-gar.

—London Standard.

How Gold Leaf Kills.

The Chinese consul at San Francisco discussed at a dinner his country's customs.

"There is one custom," said a young girl, "that I can't understand, and that is the Chinese custom of committing suicide by eating gold leaf. I can't understand how gold can kill."

"The partaker, no doubt," smiled the consul, "succumbs to a consciousness of inward guilt."—Los Angeles Times.

Manuscript Letters Rare.

Manuscripts and holograph letters from living literary celebrities should be hoarded with great care by their recipients. The prospect is that they will grow increasingly rare. Autograph signatures are probably all that the next generation will be able to bid for in the auction rooms and add to its collections.—New York Tribune.

To please, one must make up his mind to be taught many things which he already knows by people who do not know them.—Chamfort.

A Fearless Quaker.

Uncle Abe was noted for his ability to turn his clouds inside out and show the silver lining. If any particular cloud was dark through and through he wisely supplied it with the lining from another. His yoke of steers had taken the cash prize on the first day of the fair. On the second some new contestants were entered, and Abe would probably be outclassed. But, as usual, he had made the most of good fortune while it lasted.

"Aren't you quaking in your boots?" a friend asked.

Abe thrust out a foot clad in new tan leather.

"Why, yes," he said; "I am quaking in my boots. But when I got that $50 yesterday I made sure they should be new boots. It ain't so bad to quake if you can do it in new boots."—Youth's Companion.

Ghiberti's Famous Doors.

The world renowned doors of the baptistry at Florence represent nearly the entire lifework of Ghiberti. He began the first pair when he was twenty-three years old, and when he finished the second pair he was seventy-three. Excepting the three statues outside Or San Michele and one or two minor works, these two pairs of bronze doors represent his labors for half a century. These doors, declared by Michelangelo "fit to be the gates of paradise," represent the book of Genesis in all the depth of its meaning, and the skill of the artist has never been overpraised. It is impossible to exaggerate the glory of the work, and if one has the time and money the sight of those wonderful doors is well worth the trip to Florence.

Resolution No. 405.

A RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE CITY OF GLENDALE ORDERING CERTAIN STREET WORK TO BE DONE ON LOUISE STREET.

The Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale do resolve as follows:

SECTION 1. That the street work herein described is required by the public interest and convenience, and the Board of Trustees of the City of Glendale, State of California, hereby orders the same to be done according to the Specifications and Plans adopted for said work, and under the direction and to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets of said city, to wit:

First: That that portion of the roadway of Louise Street in said City from the South line of Doran Street to the North line of First Street be graded and oiled in accordance with the plans and profiles on file in the office of the City Engineer, and Specifications for the construction of graded and oiled streets on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Glendale, said Specifications being numbered 10, excepting, however, that all oil applied as called for under afore-described Specifications No. 10 shall be applied by a machine which must be of such construction that the oil will be spread uniformly over the surface of the road in any quantity per application from one-eighth (1/8) of a gallon per square yard to one (1) gallon per square yard. The oil must be spread or forced upon the surface of the road in such manner as to immediately cover every particle of surface when applying a quantity of oil as small as one-eighth (1/8) of a gallon per square yard. The oil above the nozzles must be maintained at a uniform pressure during the application of the entire tank of oil, and such pressure shall not be less than thirty (30) pounds per square inch. The machine shall be provided with a transverse distributing cylinder of such length that it will spread oil over a width of road of eight (8) feet in each course, in order to prevent overlapping or necessity for "bucketing" or patching with oil as is required with oilers of less width.

Second: That a cement curb be constructed along each line of the roadway of said Louise Street from the South line of Doran Street to the North line of First Street (excepting along such portions of the line of said roadway upon which a cement curb has already been constructed to the official line and grade) in accordance with the Specifications for the construction of cement curbs on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Glendale, said Specifications being numbered 2.

Third: That a cement sidewalk five (5) feet in width be constructed along each side of said Louise Street from the South line of Doran Street to the North line of First Street (excepting such portions of said Louise Street between said points along which a cement sidewalk five (5) feet or more in width has already been constructed to the official line and grade), said sidewalk to be constructed according to the Specifications for the construction of cement sidewalks on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Glendale, said Specifications being numbered 1.

Sec. 2. The GLENDALE NEWS, a weekly newspaper of general circulation, published and circulated in said City of Glendale, is hereby designated as the newspaper in which this Resolution and notice of said street work inviting sealed proposals shall be published in the manner and form and by the persons required by law.

Section 3. The City Clerk of the City of Glendale is hereby directed to post conspicuously for five days on or near the Chamber Door of the Board of Trustees, in the manner and form required by law, a notice with Specifications, inviting sealed proposals or bids for doing said work; and said City Clerk is hereby directed to publish for two days in said newspaper hereby designated for that purpose, as aforesaid, in the manner and form required by law, a notice with Specifications, inviting sealed proposals or bids for doing said work and referring to the Specifications posted or on file.

Said notice shall require a certified check or bond, either, as prescribed by law, and for an amount not less than ten per cent. of the aggregate of the proposal. Said City Clerk is also hereby directed to publish this Resolution for two days in the manner required by law, in said newspaper designated for that purpose, as aforesaid.

The Shining Morning Smile

is a trade winner. Try it. But man cannot live by morning trade alone. Therefore the smile should stay on the job all day. And not only should the merchant's face smile, but his store front, likewise his town. To make a store front smile keep it clean. Have a bright and attractive display in the window. If the merchant smiles and his store front smiles the customer will smile, and everybody will be happy. To make a town smile clean the streets and have attractive buildings and lawns.

A. E. VOLKER INJURED.

A. E. Volker, a deaf and dumb resident of West Glendale, was seriously injured while going to his work at the Los Angeles box factory at Tropico, Wednesday morning. It was shortly after 7 o'clock when the accident happened. Mr. Volker had reached a point near Park avenue and was going south when a motor "speeder," a three-wheeled car, also southbound came up behind him. When about a hundred yards from Volker the men on the car called to him to get out of the way, but he failed to hear. The driver claimed that he applied the brakes, but could not stop the machine before it struck the unfortunate man.

Mr. Volker was thrown several feet to the side of the track and when picked up was in an unconscious condition. Dr. Chase was summoned and he took the victim to Glendale in his auto. The man who was driving the machine was severely injured about the head and shoulder by the machine, which jumped the track and rolled over on him. He was taken to a Los Angeles hospital. His companion, however, escaped with only a slight injury to his side.

It is situated on the west side of the street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. The rooms will be 50x70 feet. It will be entirely of brick with white glazed pressed brick at the front.
